

Beverly K Wooley

As a toddler, Beverly came to Alaska in 1959. She currently lives in Anchorage with her husband, Chris, where they raised their two children. A graduate of Washington State University, Beverly has 30 years of public health experience in Alaska. Her career highlights include serving as the Director of the Alaska Division of Public Health from 2007 – 2009 and as Director of the Municipality of Anchorage Department of Health and Human Services from 2003 - 2007. Mostly retired now, she works on an interim basis with the Alaska Native Tribal Health Consortium. A longtime advocate for the right to clean air, Beverly joined the Alaska Leadership Council in 2014. Beverly says, “I am passionate about advancing public policies focused on realistic, sustainable solutions to complex public health issues, and I’m committed to working to ensure the right of all people to smoke-free businesses and public places throughout all regions of Alaska.”
